BOY, 2, HURT AS HE FALLS OUT OF UNCLE'S TRUCK

Earl Guise Injured About Head Near Table Rock Today.

KIN OF CHILD IN HOSPITAL

Earl Ralph Guise, 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guise, near Bender's church, was seriously injured this morning at 11 o'clock when he fell out of a truck driven by an uncle, Kenneth Guise, 19, Gettysburg R. 4.

The accident occurred near Table Rock as the machine was going around a curve. The child grasped the inner handle of the door which swung open, allowing him to fall out onto the highway.

The child struck his head and hospital authorities believe his skull is fractured. He also suffered chest and abdominal injuries and lacerations.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Guise are residing temporarily at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Guise, Gettysburg R. 4, along the Biglerville road.

Child Asks for His Father

This morning, little Earl wanted to go with his uncle, Kenneth, to Table Rock. The accident occurred shortly after Kenneth started for home. The truck was traveling slowly at the time, and the driver stopped almost instantly.

When the lad was admitted to the hospital, he was greatly shocked, but early this afternoon he aroused somewhat and asked for his father. Both Mr. and Mrs. Guise were at the child's bedside.

News of the child's injury is being kept from the grandmother, Mrs. Earl Guise, who submitted to a serious operation at the Warner hospital, Tuesday, and is not yet out of danger, although she is somewhat improved.

The accident was reported to the local sub-station of the state highway patrol.

'GAME' OPERATOR RUNS AFOUL OF LAW AT CIRCUS

Trooper Makes Arrest After Boy Loses Fifty Cents at Gaming.

TENT DISAPPEARS FROM NEARBY LOT

The Walter L. Main circus played to capacity audiences here, Thursday afternoon and evening, but that is not all to the story.

John Wall, of Philadelphia, one of the concessioners, was arrested Thursday evening on a charge of gaming, and a "John Doe" warrant was issued this morning for the concessioner who took a tent belonging to Russell Shaner, West High street.

Wall was arrested by Corporal A. B. Verbecken, of the local sub-station of the state police, after the officer received a complaint from a Gettysburg mother that her 13-year-old son lost 50 cents at a gaming table operated on the circus grounds.

Trooper Confiscates Money
Corporal Verbecken said Wall had a table covered with money and the idea of the game was that any person throwing a small ring over any coin would receive the money so rained. The officer said all of the odds favored the operator of the game.

The trooper arrested Wall and, over the concessioner's protests, confiscated the money on the table, amounting to $25.54, which will be turned over to the county.

Wall paid a fine of $5 and costs on the gaming charge before Justice of the Peace Walter A. Snyder.

Tent Disappears
Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer this morning issued the "John Doe" warrant for the circus employee, who took a 5x7 tent, owned by Shaner, from a lot near the circus grounds.

While the circus was in town, the employee asked Shaner on two different occasions to sell him the tent, but the local man refused because he had put it up for his children. During the night the tent, together with all of the stakes and other appurtenances, disappeared. Shaner planned to take the warrant to Hanover, where the circus played today, in an effort to recover his tent.

POSTAL CLERKS COMMEND TOWN FOR RECEPTION

Delegates Pleased With Gettysburg as Convention Site.

WOMEN'S GROUP ELECTS OFFICERS

Their thirty-fourth national convention ended, delegates to the biennial four-day session of the United National Association of Post Office Clerks were en route to their homes in almost every section of the United States today.

Warm in their praise of hospitable reception and entertainment they received here, delegates took home with them pleasant memories of Gettysburg's desirability as a convention city.

"Here in Gettysburg we are all together for the four days of our convention and residents of the town did all in their power to make our stay pleasant," one officer of the association declared. "In large cities in which we have met, the delegates were scattered and we scarcely made a ripple on the busy life of a busy city. If we ever get an opportunity, I'm in favor of returning to Gettysburg."

Town Called a "Garden Spot"
Some of the delegates were still in town this morning, reluctant to leave a community in which they were so splendidly entertained.

The UNAPOCS will hold their 1937 convention at Fort Worth, Texas, that city having won out over Los Angeles, California.

Gettysburg was described as "one of the garden spots of the world" in a resolution adopted at Thursday's closing session of the national ladies' auxiliary at the Eagle hotel, and "a gracious vote of thanks from the very depths of our hearts to the Gettysburg local, 1242, and its auxiliary, and we assure them they will always have a warm spot in our hearts."

LAUNCHES QUIZ INTO EXPENSES

P. S. C. Wants To Know How Much Electric Company Spent To Fight Bill.

Harrisburg, Aug. 30 (AP).—The public service commission swung into its investigation of lobbying against the utilities regulation bill today by issuing subpoenas for officers of corporations to which the Metropolitan Edison company, of Reading, is said to have paid $986,268 and charged as operating expenses.

The commission ordered the inquiry yesterday to determine how much Pennsylvania utilities spent to fight the so-called death sentence for holding companies in the Wheeler-Rayburn control bill. The commission said it learned Metropolitan Edison paid $42,265 to the Utilities clearing corporation for expenses in connection with the public utilities act of 1935.

One of those subpoenaed today, the commission said, was C. C. Cash, of Reading, president of the Utilities clearing corporation and assistant secretary of the E. M. Gilbert engineering corporation. Cash was ordered to appear at a hearing September 19. Representatives of the commission were sent to Reading to serve summons on officers of other companies, including the Utilities management corporation, the Public utilities appliance corporation and the Utilities purchasing and supply company, all of which are alleged to have had financial dealings with Metropolitan Edison.

The resolution was read to the morning session of the 34th national convention by First Vice-President James T. O'Malley, of St. Louis, Missouri. It was moved for adoption, seconded and passed unanimously without debate. President John J. Barrett had previously expressed the hope that the G. A. R. and the U. C. V. would meet in Gettysburg in 1938.

Her attorney told the court she was entitled under the will to $10,000 a year until she is 21—she is now 19—and $25,000 a year thereafter.

"Little NRA" for Soft Coal Is Set Up by Government

Washington, Aug. 30 (AP).—Material for a new test of the government's power to regulate industries was placed on the statute books today when President Roosevelt signed the Guffey bill setting up a "little NRA" for the soft coal industry.

The law is designed to allow soft coal producers to fix prices under federal supervision. Proponents contend this will assure sufficient income to pay fair wages.

Advocated by the United Mine Workers, the President and some producers, it was approved by a slim majority in congress despite protests that it was unconstitutional.

Mr. Roosevelt urged that doubt of its constitutionality "however reasonable" not be allowed to stand in the way.

Steel companies owning their own mines may attack the plan in the courts.

King's Third Son Engaged to Marry

Balmoral, Scotland, Aug. 30 (AP).—King George and Queen Mary, with unexpected suddenness and on the heels of the Queen Astrid tragedy, announced Thursday the engagement of their next to the last bachelor son, the duke of Gloucester, to Lady Alice Christabel Montagu-Douglas-Scott.

The tall 35-year-old Gloucester is the third son of the family and when he weds, only the Prince of Wales of the four sons will remain a bachelor.

Lady Alice is a member of one of England's oldest families. She is 33, of fair complexion, a sportswoman and an artist.

With characteristic dignity and lack of excess wordage, the announcement was given the English public in the curious language adopted by court circles.

It said simply: "It is with great pleasure that the king and queen announce the betrothal of their dearly beloved son, the Duke of Gloucester, to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, the daughter of the duke and duchess of Buccleuch and Queensberry, to which union the king has gladly given his consent."

Dated January 31, 1935, the will names a son, Avery Rockefeller, and a son-in-law, Frederic Lincoln, Jr., of Greenwich and New York, as executors and trustees.

A number of resolutions adopted by the postal clerks' convention, Thursday, appear on page five of today's Gettysburg Times.

Approximately 1,890,000 acres in southeast Missouri have been improved by drainage enterprises.

Death Stalks Race

Cecil Allen Dies in Airplane Crash During $12,500 Competition.

Union Air Terminal, Burbank, California, Aug. 30 (AP).—Death claimed Cecil Allen early today as he followed eight other planes rolling toward Cleveland and New York in the annual $12,500 Bendix trophy race.

Allen, 33-year-old former trans-Pacific flyer, was killed when his plane crashed, apparently never having gained altitude after speeding down the fog-bound runway.

Meanwhile the eight other flyers including such prominent aviation figures as Amelia Earhart and Col. Roscoe Turner, sped eastward unaware of the tragedy.

Today's flight was Allen's first experience in a trans-continental speed dash.

Orphans' Home

(Continued from Page One) The audience sang "Faith of Our Fathers." The response Scripture reading was led by the Rev. H. S. Fox, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, Gettysburg. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Felix Peck, Silver Run, Maryland.

Dr. Stahr Speaks John L. Gerber, York, president of the board of directors, gave a short opening address, of welcome.

The Rev. Dr. Henry I. Stahr, president of Hood college, Frederick, delivered the anniversary address. He spoke on the spirit of Christian sacrifice and Christian benevolence, as it was exemplified in the gift of the donors and founders of the home, Mr. and Mrs. George Hoffman. The audience joined in singing the Hoffman hymn, led by the band.

History of Home

President of the Board John Gerber read a short historical synopsis of the home, as follows: The two farms of nearly 200 acres were donated by George W. and Agnes Hoffman to the trustees of Potomac synod of the Reformed church in the United States for the founding of an industrial orphans' home. The first board of directors was elected by Potomac synod and Gettysburg classis. The board was organized with the election of the Rev. Thomas J. Barkley, president. Stewart Hartman was elected superintendent. The Barkley cottage was the first building erected on the ground.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Helb, York, offered to build the administration building. Because of the need of room for homeless children of members of Emanuel Reformed church, Hanover, offered to pay for the cottage known as Emanuel's cottage for boys and girls. Zion classis offered to build a cottage for boys and girls and is known as Zion cottage. The Maryland classis offered to erect and finance the school building which is known as Maryland classis school building. Gettysburg classis assisted in financing the erection of the heating plant. The Everhart dining hall the atest building erected, was built through a donation of Mr. and Mrs. Everhart. Andrew H. Smith succeeded the Rev. Mr. Hartman as superintendent. The Rev. Andrew Smith was succeeded by his son, Sidney Smith. The Rev. Smith was succeeded by the present superintendent, the Rev. A. P. Frantz. During the twenty-five years there was not a death among the children that were at the home.

Among the large audience assembled on the spacious and shady lawn of the home were more than one hundred ministers from different classes of the Potomac synod. They were from Zion, Gettysburg, Mercersburg, Juniata, Maryland and North Carolina classes. More than a dozen buses brought people from Baltimore, Washington and Maryland, while the other thousands came by private automobiles.

MORNING STAR

— BY MARIAN SIMS —

SYNOPSIS: Emily Felton has relapsed into the dull routine of small town life since graduation from Ardmore College. Her brightest memories are of Judith and David (Carol) who still loves David, although when the Carrolls lost their beautiful plantation, David disappeared into China and has not been heard from since. At least by Emily. Emily has the kind and gentle Edwin Barnes, and a job at the Elston library for compensation. She is now quarreling with her board over "wicked books."

Chapter 15 ESCAPE?

The chairman looked uncomfortable. He had a reluctant admiration for Emily, but she was far too small and too pretty to be so strong-minded. She ran the library beautifully, though, and she was a decided social asset, so there was no question of dismissing her.

"I think it quite important," he said bandily, "that they be kept from old as well as young. We cannot pander to the low tastes of the majority."

"Then why expect the majority to read your books?" Emily demanded. "You have to choose, you know." She arose, smiling charmingly into their astonished faces. "If there's no further business I shall ask you to excuse me."

She found the reading-room full to the window-sills with school children, whom the assistant was vainly trying to quell. Her head ached with their demands and with the September heat.

The clock seemed to be moving backwards, Emily decided wearily. Almost an hour until she could usher the shuffling children out and go home for a quick swim before dinner.

She began to catalogue a shipment of new books, and wondered if it wouldn't be simpler to phone for William and the car instead of trudging home in the dusty heat. It seemed ridiculous to be driven home from work by a chauffeur, but there was no sense in wearing a hair shirt just because you could afford a silk one.

In the end she decided against phoning, and found Edwin, who had expected to be busy, waiting for her outside. He helped her into his car solicitously, grateful for the welcoming smile she bestowed.

"You look tired," he said gently, with a glance at the heavy shadows beneath her eyes.

Emily's lids dropped. The light was brilliant and grateful after the still, heated darkness of the library.

"I am, September in Alabama ought to be deleted from the calendar."

He was shifting gears, staring hard at the gray-blue pavement ahead of him. The pavement was mottled with shadows from the great elms that almost met overhead.

"Are you—go in to work on there another year?" he brought out at last.

"I haven't decided yet. After my outburst this afternoon they may regret having urged me to."

He looked perturbed. If Emily insisted on working, he considered the library the most genteel calling she could have chosen. He read very little himself, but he had the non-reader's almost superstitious respect for books.

"I hope you didn't offend them," he said.

She smiled ruefully. "I did worse. I offended their prejudices. It was the heat, I think; spontaneous combustion." She told him what had happened.

His perturbation deepened. "But, Emily, I think they're right. There's enough unhappiness and immorality in real life."

"Without reading about it in books," she broke in and finished for him. "I don't understand why they haven't put you on the Board."

He looked so hurt that she was ashamed of herself. Edwin had a positive genius for provoking caustic comments that you immediately regretted. She hastened to change the subject, but her mind went on turning over the problem with which it was involved.

Could she resign herself to another year of it? She had lain awake a good many nights recently, wrestling with the problem. She had to decide it soon, she knew, because the longer she put it off the more incapable she would be of any decision.

One year of idleness, one year of the library; surely that was enough. But after the library? Edwin?

She glanced at him beside her, driving deliberately and carefully; his hat perched primly upon his head. Why couldn't he, just once, slump down in his seat and, with the wind playing havoc with his hair, drive his car as fast as it would go?

He couldn't, she knew, because he was incapable of anything so juvenile and unconsidered.

"Why should I risk your life and mine," he would have asked in surprise, "when it isn't at all important that we hurry?"

His car, too, was typical of him; an immaculate small sedan, practical and comfortable. With a quizzical smile she remembered David's roadster of four—no, dear heaven, it was five years ago!

The roadster had had a top, just as David had had a hat, but neither of them was ever used. But like David, she admitted honestly, the roadster had been enjoyable only in fair weather.

Edwin swung the car into her own driveway, and the air was immediately cooler with the mist of innumerable sprays. The lawn was green-gold in the fading sunlight, purple in the shadows; not even September, she thought disrespectfully, dared to lay its searing hands upon Frances Felton's gardens.

"Won't you stay for a swim?" she asked him lazily. "The prospect of one has kept me going all afternoon."

He hesitated, because he wanted so badly to stay, and because he had never outgrown his youthful lack of self-confidence in her presence. "I'd like to—very much."

"Then I'll see you in ten minutes. There's a suit for you in the bathroom."

The jade-green water, amazingly cool, was like a tonic. She dove and swam like a porpoise, trying valiantly to shed the day's lethargy, while Edwin watched her with a dog-like devotion. He swam as he drove; precisely and efficiently without exerting any more speed or effort than the occasion demanded.

If it were a case of rescuing someone he would put forth the last vestige of his strength, and, if that was insufficient, would quietly and matter-of-factly drown, without ever realizing the fact that he had been heroic.

It was a pity, she thought for the hundredth time, that all the major virtues were so uninspiring to live with.

The swim over, Edwin hesitated at the door of his car, the stiff straw hat in his hand. "Are you—doing anything tonight?"

The same question, hopefully and hesitantly put. Edwin still went through the formality of asking for evenings that had been his for two years. This time she surprised him.

"Nothing but going to bed." She smiled to soften the answer. "But you must be sure to come tomorrow night."

His face glowed, thanking her for the twenty-four hours of anticipation with which she had presented him. He drove almost gaily away.

Dinner was on the terrace, beautifully cool in the September dusk. Frances looked very young in the muted light, but her husband's face looked shadowed and old. Emily felt the old surge of pity for Jeffrey, who had been sentenced to spend his life in the rarefied atmosphere of his wife's ideals.

She hated to shatter the evening's peace by introducing a controversial subject, but there was no choice. She could postpone the discussion, but she couldn't avoid it. She drank deeply of her iced coffee.

"Mr. Small asked me at the meeting today about this winter."

Her mother glanced sharply at her. "About taking the library, you mean?"

"Yes. My year is up this month."

"What did you tell him?"

She could see that Frances had guessed at her indecision; had dreaded it. Her father was silent.

"I told him I hadn't decided yet."

Frances ate her salad daintily. "If you are—still undecided—a seems to me an excellent position to have."

She had been very democratic and consistent about Emily's working. Emily had seen her, fairly glowing in her own consistency.

"I'd hardly call it a position. Sixty dollars a month and no authority whatever. I could make the thing a success if they'd only give me a chance."

"But the money," Frances pointed out, "is secondary."

"No, it isn't," Emily said quietly. "It's humiliating to think that what you do is only worth sixty dollars a month. That's why I want to go away."

Her mother's head came up. Her fathers fork clattered against the plate. A momentary breeze fluttered the shaded candles.

Emily experiences defeat, tomorrow, but not in the usual way.

Mush Ballers Play Tie Game Thursday

Thursday evening the Catholic and Reformed boys engaged in a bitter struggle for third place in the mush ball league, but when the umpire called the game on account of darkness at the end of the regulation 7-inning game neither team had the advantage. The Reformed started off with two runs. It looked as though the game would end with the score 2-0, but the Catholic boys came through with three in the fifth. In the sixth the Reformed scored three to make it 5-3 in their favor. The Catholics were still in the game and tied it up in the seventh. The game will be played over on Labor Day at 5:30 o'clock.

Hixon, playing second for the Reformed, carried off the honors at the bat. He made a home run, a three bagger and a single in as many times at bat. He scored one run and drove in three others.

The remaining games to be played in the league are:
Tonight—St. James' vs. A. M. E. Zion at 5:30 o'clock.

September 2—Reformed vs. A. M. E. Zion at 3:00 p. m., and Reformed vs. Catholics at 5:30 p. m. This evening's game will be hard fought from start to finish. Both teams are virtually tied for first place and the teams will be trying hard to stay at the top of the league.

Today's Talk

—By George Matthew Adams—

NEITHER SOLOMON NOR CROESUS

SOLOMON was supposed to have lived in such royal glory that he was used as an illustration of great wealth and purple eminence — yet Christ, in one of his intimate talks, brought out the suggestion that this king "in all his glory, was not arrayed" as one of the lilies of the field.

And Croesus is referred to time and again through the pages of history as an example of great wealth—but that is all we know about him.
He might as well not have existed at all for all the inspiration he has been to the world. Unusual intelligence does not always give itself up to mere money making.

There is greater glory and spiritual uplift in the perfect night sky, on this little island where I am vacationing for a few brief weeks, with the moon bathing a streak of gold across the placid waters of the lake, than in mere man's wisdom and wrath.

There is a wonderful red pine near a path that I love. It is perfection itself. No lover of trees, or cultivator of them, could have raised one more right in its health and beauty. I put my hand to a cluster of its green needles and fondle them as though each talked to me of its right and pride to be in this world. A spectacle of grace. How glorious in the early morn, with the trinkle of the new sunlight playing about each branch so laden in mystery.

Solomon and Croesus interest me only as historic characters, but nature's children and nature's silent and musical life seems all a part of the movement of my thoughts. I sit upon an aged rock and become a part of it. I touch the tiny flower and it bursts its joy until my heart is moist with the very tears of its happy romping in the sunlight.

Each tree becomes a beloved spire in the cathedral of nature. The chanting and singing of the birds in the early morning and at dusk supplement my own worship in this free structure of the wild.

The slim, towering white birches gather among themselves to sing their own praise, and the huge hemlocks sway with honest sturdiness that is so characteristic to them, casting shadows to the earth in affectionate understanding.

Miss Anna M. Bream, of East Middle street, is visiting friends in Coatesville.

Miss Beulah Armor, of Philadelphia, is visiting at the home of her father, William D. Armor, on East Middle street.

Miss Grace Eicholtz, of Steinwehr avenue, has gone to Greenville, N.
C., to spend four months.

Miss Nellie Mickle, of Pittsburgh, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Mickley, near Orrtanna.

Mrs. Harvey Trostle and sons,
Paul and Crawford, of York street, are spending a week with friends in York.

Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Hershey, who have been spending the summer at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Slonaker, Baltimore street, have returned to Lafayette, Indiana.

Members of the Acorn Club met Monday evening at the home of Miss Ruth Klepper.

Miss Lillian Reed and Miss Mary Banford, of Philadelphia, who have been spending several weeks with Miss Margaret McMillan, West Middle street, returned to their homes Monday.

Dr. W. H. Danforth, who has offices in the Kadel building, is on a three weeks' vacation trip to Bristol, Vermont.

The cast as well as the director and most of the crew are Irish, including Cagney, O'Brien and Mc-Hugh as the three sons of Mary

DUCE FAILS TO MOVE BRITISHGovernment to Proceed With Strong Policy at Geneva
In Spite of Defy.

London, Aug. 30 (AP)—The British government intends to proceed with its own strong policy at Geneva, informed quarters reported Thursday, regardless of what Benito
Mussolini has to say.

Failing in efforts at Geneva to avert war, Britain hopes the United States and France jointly will call a consultation of all signatories of the Briand-Kellogg peace pact in an effort to prevent war.

Il Duce's proclamation Wednesday night was termed just another of his customary strong public statements by these sources. Downing street, it was said, officially ignored the long statement and refuses to be stampeded into a reply now.

There has been no formal approach either to Washington or Paris in the Kellogg pact question.
But London hopes if a final resort were necessary, President Roosevelt would take the initiative in a move to keep Mussolini from war through the treaty.

Mussolini's statement that British interests are not imperiled by his plans got a lukewarm reception here. It was emphasized the main thing Britain is after it not a statement about its own affairs, but an affirmation of Italian intentions not to resort to war.

Anthony Eden, minister of League of Nations affairs, who will head the delegation at Geneva next week at the vital council meeting, went to Lympe for the day. But both he and Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, who is at Norfolk, are keeping in touch with the foreign office.

young people's amusements and entertainments. Luncheon will be held from 11:30 to 1 o'clock, with the afternoon program will begin immediately afterwards. Officers will be elected in the afternoon.

Among the speakers will be C. A.
Mummert, of Huntingdon, Indiana;
Donald Mummert, of Harrisburg, and George W. Baker, of Abbots-town. Mrs. E. S. Wolf will speak on "Some Pioneer Experiences of Mummert Families," and Charles E. Wehler will talk on "Fellowship and Goodwill."

The musical program will be given by the Mummert String orchestra; the Bowser family; Lillian and Gladys Staub, Billy Sanders, Harold Sanders, Helen Jane Mummert, and recitations by Betty Rupp, Norman Staub, Morris Strausbaugh and Kathleen Mummert.

Historical notes will be read by Jacob A. Mummert, historian, and there will be memorial tributes to the late Prof. H. M. Thomas, Charles L. Baker and E. S. Wolf.

Some Flounders
Are Southpaws

Portland, Me. (AP)—To the un-practiced eye, one flounder looks very much like any other flounder—but not to Mike Flaherty, more than 30 years a Portland Pier fish cutter.
There are right-handed flounders and left-handed flounders, says Mike, who has personally dissected thousands of the halibut's poor relation.

Mike will admit, however, that the port-siders are rare. Many fish cutters—even he at times—pass them by without notice.

Mike, explaining the freaks to landlubbers, lays a righthander beside a left-hander, both topsides up.
Then he shows that the normal flounder's head lies to the left, the stomach to the right. The freak fish's anatomical construction is just the opposite.

The way to destroy one of the worst enemies of the vintage grape —the leafhopper—is to spray the vines with nicotine, says the department of agriculture.

Welding
... the best way to make a perfect union of two pieces of metal is by welding them together.

... and the best way to get a more pleasing flavor and a better taste in a cigarette is by welding together the different types of tobacco ...

That is just what we do in making CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes—the three types of mild ripe home-grown tobaccos, that is tobaccos grown in this country, are welded together. Then they are welded with aromatic Turkish.
When these tobaccos are welded together you get a combined flavor which is entirely different from any one type of tobacco.

It is this welding of the right amounts of the right kind of tobaccos that makes CHESTERFIELD a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

With Us Daily

And Abraham journeyed from thence toward the south country, and dwelt between Kadesh and Shur, and sojourned in Gerar.

And Abraham said of Sarah his wife, She is my sister: and Abimelech king of Gerar sent, and took Sarah.

But God came to Abimelech in a dream by night, and said to him, Behold, thou art but a dead man, for the woman which thou hast taken: for she is a man's wife.

But Abimelech had not come near her: and he said, Lord, wilt thou slay also a righteous nation?

Said he not unto me, She is my sister? and she, even she herself said, He is my brother: in the integrity of my heart and in innocency of my hands have I done this.

And God said unto him in a dream, Yea, I know that thou dist this in the integrity of thy heart; for I also withheld thee from sinning against me: therefore suffered I thee not to touch her.

Now therefore restore the man his wife; for he is a prophet, and he shall pray for thee, and thou shalt live: and if thou restore her not, know thou that thou shalt surely die, thou, and all that are thine.

Therefore Abimelech rose early in the morning, and called all his servants, and told all these things in their ears: and the men were sore afraid.

ZAHAROFF IS REAL MYSTERY

Little Definitely Known of Europe's Munitions Salesman.

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York—Explorers, foreign correspondents, and prima donnas are favorite subjects for playwrights, but if one wanted a theme that had flames, color, and romance he need look no further than Sir Basil Zaharoff, "the Mystery Man of Europe," whose name is like a dagger-thrust of intrigue from an Oppenheim novel.

Nobody knows anything about him because nobody can get close to him. Walled in by a staff of "British Army officer-type secretaries" and attended by six stalwart Hindus, he lives his strange, mysterious life at Chateau Balincourt, a deep in his eighties and who is said to hold half the secrets of Europe in his head.

They don't even know whether he is Greek or Turkish. Some say he is the son of "Basil Zaharoff of Paris." Others believe his father was Russian and his mother Greek. The tiniest wisps of information, when tracked down, invariably come to nothing. I have heard his name in nightclubs, on subways, at the bars of ocean liners, and always the mention of it brings a hush of expectation—the hope for some startling revelation or fascinating anecdote, but all one gets are a few crumbs of rumor.

When the British Crown decorated him it was "for services rendered," but nobody other than David Lloyd George and a few bigwigs know what those services were. He was supposed to have crossed the Atlantic and held a secret conference with Hoover while Hoover was President, but that rumor was never proved. It is known that he sold cannon and battleships to various powers, that he is one of, if not the wealthiest man in Europe, and that he lives with an adopted daughter, Madame de Bourbon, who is known everywhere as "The Duchess." On his 80th birthday he was supposed to be worth $100,000,000.

A more romantic episode than his courtship with a beautiful duchess of the Spanish court could not be found anywhere. Rescuing her from the brutality of her royal husband (who was later placed in an insane asylum and kept there until he died), Zaharoff waited 40 years for her before she married him, and two years later she died.

The strange thing about Zaharoff, or so it seems to me, is that the ones who are reputed to know him well are themselves elusive will-o-the-wisps. You hear of them but never quite catch up with them. Only the other night I was hailed in a cafe by an editor who spoke enthusiastically of an acquaintance who knew Zaharoff.

"Sure, he has known Zaharoff for years," the editor insisted.

"Where in heaven's name is he?"

"If you'd like to talk to him, come on. We'll go to his hotel."

Grabbing a cab we sped across town and presented ourselves at the desk of one of New York's most exclusive hotels.

"Where is he?" the editor asked, advancing the name.

"Oh," said the clerk, "he checked out. He sailed for Italy three days ago."

Fresh Egg Law

New State Act Expected to Prove Of Benefit to the Farmers.

Pennsylvania farmers and poultrymen will benefit from the new state fresh egg law in several days, according to Secretary of Agriculture J. Hansell French.

This law, which becomes effective September 1, will protect Pennsylvania producers from importations of a low quality product and bring about an increased demand for the fresh, locally produced eggs. It is also expected to increase the price level for fresh eggs compared with eggs of unknown quality.

To gain these benefits however, the farmers must produce and sell eggs that will meet the minimum requirements of the law for fresh eggs. This will require the utmost care in the production and handling of eggs. The producers also must sell to dealers who are buying and selling fresh eggs as defined by the law. Unless the dealer is handling fresh eggs, the consumer will likely be paying for eggs of unknown quality and the producer will consequently get less for his product.

State marketing specialists give the following three important points for farmers to keep in mind in producing eggs for sale as fresh eggs: (1) gather eggs at least twice daily; (2) keep eggs in a cool, clean place below 65 degrees F.; (3) sell eggs at least twice a week. Farmers are advised to consult their county farm agent for additional suggestions.

At least five other eastern states including New Jersey, Maryland and New York have fresh egg laws in effect at this time.

Nudists Decide Publicity Worse Than Peeking as Crowds Swarm

Mild Uproar Prevents Case From Being Heard; Former Foe of Cultist Says "Family's to Home
—The Cows Needn't Fear."

Netcong, N. J., Aug. 30 (AP).—The breach-of-peace hearing of peeking Will Searles, the farmer-foe of all nudists, was adjourned indefinitely Thursday after three hours of bickering, minor uproar, occasional reference to the statute books, boos, catcalls and wisecracks.

The hearing just couldn't get started.

Long before two o'clock farmers and townsfolk, summer visitors from the hills and lakesides and spectators from the city gathered in a room over fire headquarters to see the outcome of the charges that Will peeked on his nudist neighbors.

A little after two o'clock Milford Sainy, counsel for the nudists, objected to the presence of photographers. That was settled by Magistrate Louis M. Huyler's order to leave.

Fifteen minutes later Sainy asked the press to leave. The publicity would hurt the nudists in private life, he said. The request was granted.

"Everybody must go," said Huyler. Half an hour later the spectators still lingered. Mayor Thomas Koclas thereupon ordered the hearing be held in the regular magistrate's court on the first floor. The nudists and the magistrate and lawyers went there.

And then the spectators crashed the gate again. Leslie Bain, the camp manager, protested. The mayor or protested, too. He said it ought to be public. The crowd thickened outside the firehouse. They walked in and out of the magistrate's court. Sainy argued, the mayor argued, the magistrate argued.

But the magistrate won his point. Public hearing or no hearing, he announced. Huyler banged the gavel. "Hearing adjourned, no date," he sang out.

And then the crowd let loose. Applause for the mayor, boos for the nudists. Catcalls for the nudists. Cries of "shame!" The crowd gathered in the street. The nudists—there were half a dozen—all clothed—crouched in the fire house, seeking refuge behind the engines.

Finally, a state trooper, after wrapping a paper around Bain's

EDGAR A. GUEST

I'LL TRY IT ONCE MORE

I shall go fishing some day again
With a friend I know,
And I shall be gay as I was back then

In the long ago
When we were a couple of care-free lads,
Casting our lures to the lily pads.

Oh, the years are many since need and care
Made a slave of me,
And I have been granted an hour to spare

To river and sea!
Now a middle-aged man has come back to my door

Saying: "Let's go fishing for bass once more!"

"What does it matter that youth has fled,
And our temples gray?
Or that east and north have our pathways led?

For a single day
We can forget all the cares we've known

To grasp at a joy which we used to own."

Some day he shall tap at my door again

With his eyes agleam,
And I know in my heart I shall join him then

On a certain stream Where we'll spend a day to our heart's content

In the self-same spot where our youth was spent.

BAER FINISHES DOYLE IN FIRST

Brother of Former Champion Floors Irishman 3 Times Before Referee Stops Bout.

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—The caroling Californian, Jacob (Buddy) Bear, brother of the former heavyweight champion, belted out the thumping Irish thrush, Jack Doyle, handsome broth of a lad from the "Ould Sod," in less than a round of a highly entertaining six-round combat in Madison Square Garden Thursday night.

The first round lasted only two minutes, 38 seconds, and in that time curly-headed Doyle, who really can sing, managed to get himself floored three times, once with a ringing cry of foul, before Referee Bill Cavanaugh, a sympathetic Celt himself, stopped the carnage, to the tune of whistles and snatches of song from about 10,000 spectators.

Baer, whose baritone voice has rung out from vaudeville stage and over the radio, used his tremendous bulk, 238½ pounds to great advantage. He moved in on Doyle, anaemic at 204 by comparison, at the opening bell and never stopped punching until the husband of the beautiful motion picture actress, Judith Allen, had lost all sense of his surroundings.

POLAND'S "WAR BABIES"

BELOW ARMY STANDARDS
Warsaw (AP).—The recruiting of Poland's "war babies" has disclosed generally poor physical condition because of near-starvation during infancy and childhood.

They average 2 to 3 inches below normal in height, have narrow chests, poor teeth, and are prone to bone diseases. One newspaper said many of the youths born in 1914 to 1918 are tubercular.

RUINS OF ANCIENT LAKE SEEN

The ancient legend that the city of Sanyang was buried under the water of Taihu lake hundreds or even thousands of years ago seems to be confirmed by Chinese fishermen who say the ruins of the ancient city can easily be seen from the surface of the lake.

'SMALLEST RACING PLANE' TO VIE AT CLEVELAND

O. R. Tillbury of Bloomington, Ill. (in plane) brought what he said was the "world's smallest racing plane" to Cleveland for entry in speed dashes of the National Air races. Size of the craft makes it seem more suitable for the tot in front than the pilot. It measures 4 feet high and 17 feet across the wings, and has a speed of 120 miles an hour. BASEBALL LOOP ENDS LABOR DAY

Gettysburg Needs Two Victories to Clinch Title; Bendersville Is 2nd.

The second half race of the Adams county baseball league will be brought to a close with games played Saturday and Monday afternoons.

The Saturday schedule calls for Arendtsville at Gettysburg, Cashtown at Fairfield and Bendersville at Midway. The Labor day attractions, all of which will be staged in the afternoon, are: Gettysburg at Midway, Fairfield at Arendtsville and Cashtown at Bendersville.

Gettysburg, first-half champions, can clinch the second-half honors by winning both of its remaining games. Bendersville is in second place, one full game behind the leaders. The Sadlermen can assure themselves of at least a tie by winning one game while two defeats would enable Bendersville to cop the honors providing the latter team wins both of its tilts. Fairfield has a long chance of tying in the event of winning both of its remaining games should Gettysburg lose two and Bendersville one or two.

Although only single games in the afternoon are scheduled for Labor day by league teams the locals will play a home game Monday morning at 10 o'clock, meeting Taneytown, members of the Frederick county league.

Hollywood—in this unreal parade: Charlie Farrell and Mrs. Farrell (Virginia Valli) make a good team at polo, too. . . . Charlie was umpiring the other Sunday while Virginia kept time and rang the chukker bell. . . . There's a "new Gaylor" apostrophe Farrell in his new picture, "Forbidden Heaven," in the person of Charlotte Henry, the Alice of Wonderland. . . . The Gaylor-Farrell combination of yore seems definitely ended.

A new low in things-to-kill-time has been reached. Extras on the "Masquerade" set, the day they had hot the big ball scene, could be seen painstakingly rewinding spent streamers of serpentine. But there's a reason. They take the rolls home, hellac them, and use them for coasters.

Edward Everett Horton is joining the big parade to the British studios. He'll make "Private Secretary" over

An Autograph Charge
The "show girl"—as glorified by Ziegfeld—is practically useless in a Hollywood chorus. Hermes Pan, the Fred Astaire sidekick and dance director, says he would rather have in his line-up a homely girl who can dance than a beauty who can't. For close-ups the beautiful dances gets the call, of course, but beauty without rhythm can spoil a routine more quickly than the one bad apple spoils the barrel.

Tulla Rolt is a threat to the old Hollywood custom of getting stars to give autographs. She is the beautiful Norwegian imported by Fox, and she tells about a Danish success that would hit the autograph-seekers where it hurts most. In Denmark, she says, they charge about 25 cents per autograph, the proceeds going to an actors' fund. The last time Tulla played in Copenhagen she raised about $2,500 for the fund, charging for signatures Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, et al, give away.

he sat down to the piano not only his friends but a whole audience laughed at his awkwardness. He put on the polish, and overcame his awkwardness, but that left the audience cold. Co he developed awkwardness instead and became a comedian. He would play only long enough to demonstrate that he knew how, and then his act would resolve into antics centering about the beer and cats. And so he made his name, in America and abroad, and he'll be with John Boles, Gladys Swarthout, and Willie Howard in "Rose of the Rancho."

taking dramatic lessons and his speaking voice has been lowered now to a pitch where he can "really read lines." So his current "Tarzan Returns" may be his farewell to Tarzan, and—unless his coach is too optimistic—there will be an actor there.

Alice Brady, in her role in Lawrence Tibbett's "Metropolitan," has dusted off a singing voice she stored away some seven years ago. She was a singing actress until she turned to drama—a forte the movies apparently forgot as most of her screen work has been in comedy. In "Metropolitan" she plays a comedy singer who is more ambitious than musical.

Salmon Moves Up As Vitamin Giver

Washington (AP)—The salmon is moving up in the social scale—ichthyologically speaking.

Indications that it is a more efficient provider of some vitamins than the codfish are undergoing study by chemists and biologists.

The Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, reporting recent experiments with various species of salmon from the Columbia and Fraser rivers and Puget Sound, states
